

Client: High Rise Communications Yellow News
Source: Lancashire Evening Post
Date: 01/05/2019
Page: 50984023
Reach: 10751
Value: 0

Expert SME advice to beat Brexit blues

By Tim Gavell

tim.gavell@jpimedia.co.uk
@leponline

While many firms have put investment plans on hold due to Brexit, one Chorley firm is bucking the trend with the help of a Manchester wealth creation specialist.

Inscape Interiors of Lower Healey Business Park in Froom Street, is planning ahead for when the uncertainty ends and construction firms resume full production.

S M E ' s putting plans on hold is entirely the wrong thing to do from a business wealth creation point of view, says Biramis' chief executive Christiane Hutchinson.

Christiane, who has 25 years' experience advising companies with a turnover of between £2m and £10m says the most successful firms will use the uncertain external environment to their advantage.

She said: "A time of external uncertainty is exactly the right time to maximise wealth in your business. Companies that delay making important decisions will be playing catch up. To be successful you need a growth path that works no matter what.

"All too often business owners have a financial advisor for personal investments but miss this huge opportunity to be building up as much wealth as possible in their businesses. It can be a blind spot."

Inscape which makes and installs building interiors and washrooms is not standing still.

Managing director Gary

Wynne said: "This continued uncertainty has meant that construction budgets have been delayed or put on hold.

"However, at Inscape Interiors we feel that this is just a postponement and that as soon as a political decision is made, one way or the other, certainty will return, budgets will be released and this will lead to renewed growth across the commercial construction sector. In the meantime, we are taking advantage of these challenging times and using them to improve our business and accelerate our efforts in our market place so that when the construction sector returns to normality, we are ready and even more capable of taking advantage of the and a much stronger business for the future.

"It is great to be working with Biramis to help us meet and overcome the business challenges we are facing, and most importantly, to help us see and understand the opportunities that the future presents to our business."

Client: High Rise Communications Yellow News
Source: Lancashire Evening Post
Date: 01/05/2019
Page: 50984023
Reach: 10751
Value: 0

Washroom specialist Inscape Interiors has worked on the Great Sankey Lesure Centre above. Inset, Gary Wynne

